

We are looking for an assistant professor with experience and enthusiasm in education, research and diagnostic in veterinary clinical pathology to join our established clinical pathology team. The clinical pathology team is part of the Vet school of Toulouse. The post holder will be DVM, have a PhD and if possible a European or American Diplomats certification (or be eligible to sit within 12 months) and contribute to our active residency program. Support of and collaboration with research clients is also encouraged.

The main aspects of these roles will include: research in onco-haematology, education to veterinary students and practitioners and diagnostic in the daily routine within our clinical pathology laboratory. We will consider applicants looking for full time hours.

Applicants should have, or be close to gaining, post graduate qualifications, and/or board certification in Clinical Pathology (ESVCP, ASCVP, FRCPath) and be ready to work in a busy educative and research environment. Applicants should have PhD. The applicant should speak some French to prepare the recruitment examination.

Salary is based on qualification and experience
