

Dr. Stefanie Klenner-Gastreich

Dipl. ECVCP

Dr. Stefanie Klenner-Gastreich obtained her veterinary degree at the University of Veterinary Medicine Hannover, where she also completed her doctoral research in the field of gastroenterology. Following an internship at the Small Animal Clinic of Justus Liebig University Giessen, she continued her training with a residency in laboratory diagnostics within the Central Laboratory at the same institution. She obtained the Diplomate title of the European College of Veterinary Clinical Pathology in 2011.

Following her residency, Dr. Klenner-Gastreich joined scil animal care company, where she focused on point-of-care testing (POCT), method validation, and product development. During this time, she particularly valued the collaboration and exchange of expertise with colleagues and clients in the field of laboratory diagnostics.

Teaching and continuing education have remained important aspects of her professional career. She served as a lecturer for the Veterinary Information Network online course on Quality Assurance in Veterinary Laboratories.

Dr. Klenner-Gastreich currently serves as Head of Pathology South Europe at Antech Diagnostics Germany, where she continues to ensure timely and accurate diagnostic support for veterinary clients.

In addition to her professional activities, she has been actively involved in the veterinary clinical pathology community. She previously served as Chair of the Laboratory Standards Committee of the European College of Veterinary Clinical Pathology and currently holds the position of Treasurer of the European Society of Veterinary Clinical Pathology
